

Mt. Juliet's Sherry Vaught Recognized as High School Athletic Trainer of the Year

Nashville, TN (January 18, 2004)

During its annual meeting and clinical symposium, held at David Lipscomb University, the Tennessee Athletic Trainers Society presented the Sandy Sandlin High School Athletic Trainer of the Year Award to Sherry Vaught, ATC/L. This award is given to the individual whose dedication to athletic training and athletes at the high school level sets an example for others to follow. Vaught is a Certified Athletic Trainer, employed by University Medical Center in Lebanon, Tennessee. She is a graduate of Cumberland University, where she played softball and was a student athletic trainer in the sports medicine program. Sherry has been the athletic trainer for Mt. Juliet High School since 1996. She currently resides in Lebanon with her husband and two children.

TATS Vice-President Joe Erdeljac presents the High School Athletic Trainer of the Year award to Sherry Vaught of Mt. Juliet High School.

The Certified Athletic Trainer is a highly educated and skilled professional specializing in athletic health care. In cooperation with physicians and other allied health personnel, the athletic trainer functions as an integral member of the athletic health care team in secondary schools, colleges and universities, sports medicine clinics, professional sports programs, and other settings.